Feeling stuck? Have unanswered questions about your assignments that cannot wait until class time? Do you just need a quiet place to study? GC's instructional labs can help you help your-

Of the many services for student success that the campus offers, the I-Lab, Math Hub and Writing Center are among the most invaluable. Here students can receive the individual attention they need from highly-qualified tutors and consultants to self-motivation and understanding.

I-Lab

Located in the Success Center (SC-107 on the Main Campus and SB-121 on the South Campus), the I-Lab is an integrated, individualized instructional lab serving mostly developmental students and faculty. According to I-Lab Director Stella Thompson, this lab's small but experienced staff offer mentoring and assistance with word processing software, grammar/editing and formatting according to the MLA Style Manual, among many other services.

Staff member and resident MLA formatting expert John Moody explained that while students may seek as much help as necessary in completing their assignments, that his main objective as a tutor is "teaching them how to edit their own papers."

The lab provides an "instructor-based support system for anything related to reading and writing," said Thompson. This includes free printing for INRW or English coursework. Students are advised to review the I-Lab's class schedule (several INRW classes take place in the lab throughout the day) and, if possible, visit in the afternoon. When classes are in session, the facility's 17 computers can fill up quickly; Thompson suggests that students bring their own computers when possible.

Math Hub

The Math Hub, located in the Success Center (SC-114 on the Main Campus and SB-121 on the South Campus), is a comprehensive instructional lab serving all students in math or mathintensive courses (i.e. welding, nursing, chemistry).

GC welcomes Ginger Hughes, new Writing Center coordinator

Regina Watkins

Writing Center Consultant

Ginger Hughes is the new Writing Center Coordinator. She is a native of Tennessee but has lived in Texas for twenty years. She received her Associate's degree in General Studies from Grayson College. Upon graduating, she proceeded to Texas Woman's University where she received both her Bachelor's and Master's degrees

Hughes brings with her the knowledge of the workings of a writing center, as she worked at TWU's Write She strives to make sure the Site in addition to teaching English composition for the past two years. She currently divides her time between Grayson at the Writing Center as well as continuing to teach composition in Denton. She accepted the position as Coordinator of the Writing Center because she received her foundation and educational pursuits at GC.

Her responsibilities in the Writing Center are to continue keeping the center running smoothly and offer needed writing help.

Writing Center meets the needs of the students and faculty.

Her goals and plans are to get acquainted and connect with as many staff and students as possible. When asked what she liked best about Grayson, she did not hesitate and replied, "The people - the students, faculty and the staff!"

Hughes wants everyone to know they are welcome to come to the Writing Center and that we are here to as-

Painting with a Twist in downtown Sherman. Painting with a Twist provides an all-ages BYOB painting class available to the public.

To exist or co-exist: can the local art community bridge the gap?

Wesley Brown Student

When strolling down Main Street in Denison, Texas, it's not uncommon to see an art gallery with its doors wide open, luring one to take a closer look inside. However, to the downtown Sherman area, you won't find an art gallery or, at least, one that's open to the public.

What you will see, however, is law office after law office. Resident Johnny Waitt resides in the Travis Street Lofts across from Chase only thirteen miles south Bank in one of Sherman's downtown blocks. "I live in downtown Sherman now... but if I didn't have a house that needed furnishing or a current lawsuit against me, there wouldn't be any purpose of actually going into any business," says Waitt.

Do you feel safe on campus?

Andrea Raber Student

In 2013, there were more than two-dozen reported shootings on or near college campuses in the United States. According to the Huffington Post, "if it's a school week in America, odds are there will be a school shooting." Eighteen people were reported to have died and several others were injured.

Some of the shootings did not happen on campus, but they happened close enough for school officials to feel the incident posed a threat on the campus. So the question stands: do you feel safe on your college campus?

Every school in the county, whether it is a high school or college, has an emergency plan in place. Grayson College has an "Emergency Response Guide" (September 26, 2013). The guide covers how the college would respond to most types of emergency situations. Staff administrators members, and instructors should be aware of this guide. Most, if not all, schools should have an emergency plan that is available for staff, parents, students and visitors to view.

According to the Grayson College "Emergency Response Guide" (located at Grayson.edu under the college info tab, in the College Police/Safety section), in the event of an armed/dangerous person(s) on campus, the college adopted the "Run, Hide, Fight" strategy.

These steps are for anyone on campus who may be faced with an armed person. In this section of the guide to do and whom to notify if you were faced with an armed person. So, all of this information is available for everyone to read. But, how many students and faculty members would know what to do in the event that this happened?

Several college students from Grayson College, Collin College and Brookhaven College knew some of the procedures listed in the "Emergency Response Guide" from when they were a child and had been taught what to do during school drills. But in the instance of an armed person, the only response was "to leave the campus." What if that was not an option? None of the students had an answer.

Very few know that there is an "Emergency Response Guide" available for them to look at and learn the procedures on what to do in many different emergency

Major safety incidents are not limited to violent incidents at schools/campuses. There is also the threat of natural disasters. In Texas, we have the threat of tornados. Most campuses (or the city where the campus is) should have an outdoor warning siren.

According to the Grayson there are directions on what College "Emergency Response Guide," "in the event that a tornado is sighted and moving in the general direction of the college, persons will be notified of a tornado alert by Grayson College Emergency Notification System to include the sounding of the Outdoor Warning Siren. Once the alert is given, all persons should take cover in a designated shelter or the lower level interior hallway of the building away from areas containing large amounts of glass. Disabled persons should be assisted to shelter area."

After taking the time to really think about how safe you feel on a campus, do you feel that you would be able to stay calm and do what is necessary?

"The truth of the matter is, no matter how many times you read a manual or how much training an officer has, you do not have all of the details of an incident until they happen. Colleges, schools, and police departments prepare for the worst and hope for the best, but you can only do what you can do when emergency strikes," said Officer Chris Peacock of the Prosper Police Department.

Everyone involved does everything that they are trained to do, and the civilians involved try to follow all of the steps that they have read over and studied, but that only applies to the people who have actually read the information that is available to them.

So we ask again, do you feel safe when you are on your campus? The answer should be "yes." The police, administrators, staff and students should be able to do their part that is described in the "Emergency Response Guide" to help ensure everyone is safe.

Change in cafeteria policy affect students, college employees

Rebecca Jones Editor

This semester the college's food services provider, Great Western Dining Services, switched from the use of all-Styrofoam disposable containers to locally recyclable materials (paper and plastics). The change was made at the request of students, who took issue with the excessive consumption of Styrofoam products on this campus.

Though Styrofoam is in fact technically recyclable, no facilities for processing the material exist in North Texas. Texas Area Solid Waste Authority representative Dale Sissney stated that the demand for such a facility simply does not exist, even in Dallas (a city of over 1 million). Thus, the use and disposal of thousands of Styrofoam products per day, generated by GC's staff and student body, resulted in unnecessary (and extremely toxic) additions to local landfills.

While, according to Director of Food Services Diane Radcliff, the transition has been "very smooth," some complaints have been lodged regarding the new materials and subsequent changes in cafeteria policy. Radcliff stated in an interview that what would have ronment," Bryant said.

amounted to a fifty cent increase in the cost of meals was absorbed instead by the discontinuation of a program that offered free drinks to college employees.

Some staff and faculty members have questioned the switch, citing their disappointment with the loss of the old program, which "[made them] feel appreciated as...[employees]." However, others like Head Chef Instructor Joanna Bryant have reacted positively. "I feel that [the policy change] is a very cheap price to pay in order to better the envi-

Other employees have expressed concern about the use of paper products because they are not as effective as insulators. This issue has been brought before the college's president, Jeremy McMillen, but will likely require additional support from faculty.

"I would like to thank the students for bringing this issue forward," McMillen said. More changes may be on the way. "We continue to discuss ways that the college can engage in environmentallyfriendly practices," the president said. Your suggestions could make a difference.

EC approval gives go-ahead for pond project planning

Rebecca Jones Editor

The Welding Technologies Association's (WTA) pond clean-up service learning project has been approved by the college's Executive Council and planning is now underway. Topics for discussion at last Tuesday's meeting included the preparation of a formal plan of action and possible community welding and design activities to attract local high school students to the pro-

The pond, now affectionately referred to as Grayson Lake by WTA members on their Facebook page, has long been an eyesore for students attending classes in the Career Training Center (CTC). According to Grant Writer Janis Thompson, "[this] is also true for hundreds of local citizens who enjoy gourmet dining at the new Hospitality Management and Culinary Arts" facility just up the hill. The CTC houses cosmetology classes and their clientele, along with welding, HVAC and industrial maintenance programs at GC.

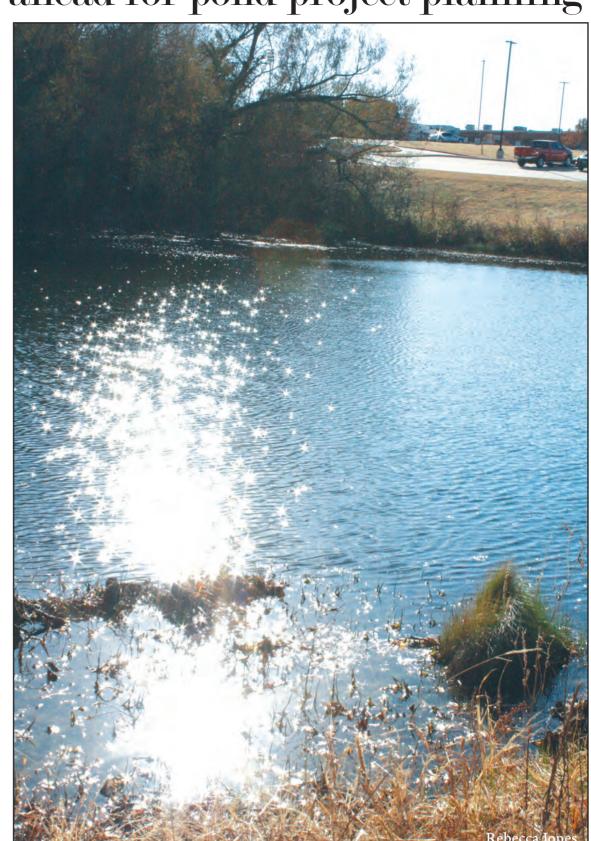

The idea took shape last semester as a mostly aesthetic undertaking but has since grown to encompass the interests of the general staff and student population. Plans included in the project's proposal include a nature trail, recreational implements (i.e. benches, tables, fishing dock) and even playground and exercise equipment. These measures will transform the pond into a viable area for study, physical activity and relaxation.

As of this publication, the WTA's current goals include scheduling a consistent time for volunteers to meet and work (tentatively one to two hours each Friday), dragging the pond to remove some damaging debris and removing unsightly underbrush from the proximity for greater accessibility.

Because the GC welding program will not be hosting the popular, area-wide Welding Rodeo that it has in years past, the WTA is currently looking at other ways to get the youth in our community involved. A welding competition could immerse local high school students in the planning and design of equipment to be used in the pond project. Manufacturer Lincoln Electric has agreed to sponsor prizes for a contest using the new virtual welding machines purchased by the college in recent years.

WTA Adviser Greg Beckley and his group have continued to place ecological considerations at the forefront of their planning for this project. "This service project will have a long lasting impact for all individuals on this campus," Beckley said, but the process will not negatively impact the ecosystem that has already been established in the pond.

CAD classes at GC are currently working to create blueprints and computer simulations that will project the new look of the pond in the northeast corner of the Main Campus.

GC Foundation kicks off 2015 campaign

The GC Foundation ushered in the 2015 "Supporting the Dream" campaign with a piano recital in Cruce Stark auditorium on 29 January. Students Kristin Alexander, Liz Crawford and Jake Davis treated donors to the beautiful sounds of the college's brand new Petrof pianos while PTK members Elizabeth Taylor and Brandon Robinson served wine and other beverages. According to Jerrie Whiteley of the Herald Democrat, "in addition to the goal of $350,000 for the scholarships, the group would also like to raise an additional $100,000 to start an endowment for veterans."

What should I consider when taking out

Michelle Flores Financial Aid Adviser

Before you take out a loan, it's important to understand that a loan is a legal obligation that you will be responsible for repaying with interest. You may not have to begin repaying your federal student loans right away, but you don't have to wait to understand your responsibilities as a borrower.

Be a responsible borrower

Keep track of how much you're borrowing. Think about how the amount of your loans will affect your future finances and how much you can afford to repay. Your student loan payments should be only a small percentage of your salary after you graduate, so it's important not to borrow more than you need for your school-related expences.

Research starting salaries in your field. Ask your school for starting salaries of recent graduates in your field of study to get an idea of how much you are likely to earn after you graduate.

You can use the U.S. Department of Labor's "Occupational Outlook Handbook" to estimate salaries for different careers or research employment opportunities advertised in the area where you plan to live to get an idea of a local starting salary. You also can use the Department of Labor's career search tool to research careers and view the average annual salary for each career.

Understand the terms of your loan and keep copies of your loan documents. When you sign your master promissory note, you are agreeing to repay the loan according to the terms of the note even if you don't complete your education, can't get a job after you complete the program or you didn't like the education you received.

Make payments on time. You are required to make payments on time even if you don't receive a bill, repayment notice or a reminder. You must pay the full amount required by your repayment plan, as partial payments do not fulfill your obligation to repay your student loan on time.

Keep in touch with your loan servicer. Notify your loan servicer when you graduate; withdraw from school; drop below halftime status; transfer to an-

more available to students.

Under the supervision of Barbara Malone, licensed professional counselor supervisor with 21 years of counseling experience, a student counselor intern has begun collaborating with the center, seeing clients on a regular basis. "We're pleased to extend our counseling services to students," Malone said, "It takes courage to address problem areas and examine painful feelings. Entering counseling is taking the first step in resolving difficulties."

Student Counselor Intern Ariel Cross is currently pursuing her Master's in Clinical Mental Health Counseling from SOSU. She plans on pursuing licensure and becoming a licensed professional counselor.

This is an ideal exchange for student counselor interns who are able to apply the counseling techniques and theories they learn in their Master's programs in a practical setting. GC students can benefit from the student counselor interns' enthusiasm for the field of counseling and passion for therapeutic listening.

Counseling is a chance to talk confidentially with someone who can help students learn coping skills and new ways of looking at situations. Some students benefit from one or two sessions of problem-solving, while some concerns may warrant multiple counseling

Almost anyone can benefit from counseling. College students in particular, may face these common concerns:

- Low self-esteem
- Confusing and distressing feelings
- Depression
- Anxiety Stress
- Substance abuse
- Problems with eating and body image
- Relationship problems
- Academic performance • Adapting to college life

Robin Robinson Theatre Director

The Theatre Department had the pleasure of experiencing workshops on movement and auditions from two GC theatre alums. Craig Foster and Ryan Dusek returned to campus to share what they have learned since leaving Grayson during the first two weeks of the Spring 2015 semester.

Craig Foster, a Denison native, graduated from GC with his Associate's degree in Theatre and finished his BFA at Sam Houston State University. He has been entertaining audiences on various cruise lines for the past few years as a singer/ dancer and met his wife, Lucia Daisog, also a dancer, on the first cruise contract they worked. Craig and Lucia both performed for the Theatre department individually and also led two different movement workshops to teach dance technique as well as a dance combination on 21 and 23 January.

Ryan Dusek, also a GC grad, led the acting class in two different workshops about "Alexander Technique" on 26 and 28 January. Dusek, who is from Potsborro, completed his BFA at Ole Miss and then completed his MFA in Acting in New York at "The New School." Ryan has performed in various professional shows since being a student at Grayson, and he enjoyed sharing his knowledge with the current theatre majors.

"Whenever we hear of one of our former students is home visiting, we always try to see if he/she can speak to our current students", said Robin Robinson. two students happen to be performers, but we have also had our students who are touring with Disney on Ice speak to our tech students as well. It is so gratifying as a teacher to see students return as adults and watch them share with current students." ♥

Waitt sees the lack of communal interest in the downtown Sherman area and believes that Sherman and Denison could both benefit from combining efforts to develop a more active art community.

With one business located on Travis Street in downtown Sherman, Painting With A Twist, the Sherman community has become slightly more interested in growing artistically. However, it just doesn't come close to the festivals and gallery openings hosted by the Denison Arts Council. Annually, residents can participate in over twenty events held in Denison that focus on the arts, as opposed to only a handful that are held in Sherman.

Although there aren't as many art festivals and art galleries available to the public each year in Sherman as there are in Denison, it does not mean that there aren't as many artists in the Sherman area. "What Sherman lacks in traditional art galleries they make up for in tattoo parlors . . . Sherman also has the Finley Theatre which provides an outlet for artists on stage," says Waitt.

One local Sherman artist, Jayce Cogburn, has been painting since 2006 and has been selling his artwork over the Internet and in other non-traditional ways, such as displaying his work for sale in tattoo shops in the area. "Sherman has been a good place for me to sell work in, but I have had the best results in Oklahoma City," says Cogburn, who recently concluded an art show in an Oklahoma City gallery, Brass Bell Studios.

Cogburn believes, "The support from younger generations in Oklahoma City allows more artists to thrive."

Main Street in Downtown Denison features 2-D and 3-D works in photography, acrylic, wood and metal.

The Denison art community shows their appreciation for their art and artists with pride, while Sherman tends to let their art and artists stand behind a curtain of law firms and tax offices, resulting in the appearance of a less-active art scene

to Sherman and Denison residents. GC art professor and active member of the Denison Arts Council Steve O. Black, " . . . would rather show his artwork in Denison because there's just greater opportunity."

Black feels that the two cities, Sherman and Denison, "do not co-exist as far as art districts go because there is too much separation between the artists, and he has been trying to break that for years and years." Steve O. Black has been hosting SMACC-Sunday Morning Art & Coffee Club-for eight years to bring local and non-local artists together. SMACC invites any artist in any area to join to discuss art, plan upcoming events and includes members from Sherman, Denison, Potts-

boro, Tom Bean and even

Bonham.

For Sherman and Denison to come together and strengthen the Grayson County art community, the separation of artists must be eradicated. "There are just a lot of lesser-known artists in both areas who feel shut out, and it would be awesome for anyone to be able to show their art and feel comfortable in either area," says Cogburn. More information can be found at www.smalltownbigart.com. For upcoming art events in the Sherman area visit www.shermantx. org. For more information attend SMACC-Sunday Morning Art & Coffee Club, hosted at Panera Bread in the Sherman Town Center Sunday morning from 9:00 a.m. to 11:00 p.m. Jayce Cogburn's work can be seen at www.jaycecogburn.com. ♥

Honors College organizes relay event for awareness

Brandy Fair Honors College Coordinator

This year, two Grayson College organizations will be teaming up to help the fight against cancer. The American Cancer Society's Relay for Life event will take place Friday, 8 May from 7 p.m. to 1 a.m. at the Scott Middle School Track. The theme is "Finish the Fight-Be a Superhero."

Professor Mary Linder has served as a chair, committee member and a team leader for Phi Theta Kappa for this event for several years. This year, Professor Fair and the will join the Phi Theta Kappa relay team (The Pink Fla-

According to the American Cancer Society, "In 2015, there will be an estimated 1,658,370 new cancer cases diagnosed and 589,430 cancer deaths in the US."

So how can you help? You can join the team and participate in the event. Professor Fair will be organizing the dodgeball tournament that happens during the Relay event. You can go online to www.relayforlife.org and make a donation to the Pink Flamingos team-there's lots of ways to participate!

Also, from 20 January to Honors College students 20 February, luminaria are available to purchase for five dollars. Relay For Life mingos) to raise even more participants and donors re-cancer and honor those battling the disease by dedicating luminaria bags. The Luminaria Ceremony occurs at every Relay For Life event. As the sun sets, luminaria lining the track light up the night. A hush falls over the crowd that had been overflowing with celebration. Relay For Life participants, survivors, and caregivers then gather to remember loved ones lost to cancer and to honor those whose fight continues. To dedicate a luminaria please contact either Professor Linder (linderm@grayson.edu) or Professor Fair (fairb@grayson.

Omicron Psi looks forward to another year of service

Andy McDaniel Student

Hello Grayson Students! As we begin the 2015 spring semester, your Phi Theta Kappa chapter has great news to share with you.

As we were all completing our finals last semester, your Grayson chapter, Omicron Psi, finished their Toys for Tots collection. It was a record-breaking year for Omicron Psi thanks to the innovative thinking of our VP of Special Projects, Elizabeth Taylor, who put together a raffle to raise money to buy extra toys and collaborated with area businesses to place toy collection boxes at their establishments. Most importantly, many children had a very merry Christmas because of these donations. Additionally, Omicron Psi won a Toys for Tots collection contest with Phi chapter of Weatherford College by raising 557 toys to Phi chapter's 250. Winning a healthy competition is fun, but the best reward is knowing that our chapters were able to gather a lot of toys that brought happiness to children.

We also had a very successful kick-off for the food pantry we are starting on campus. We hope to make the food pantry a permanent addition to the Grayson campus to serve any student who may need it. We will continue to do food drives and accept donations from individuals or organizations that wish to contribute. We collected over 7000 items from the community to get us started, and we are looking to continue this excellent work. All questions about how to donate to the food pantry can be directed to the chapter advisor, Professor Mary Linder.

Omicron Psi is set to have a successful spring semester as well! We are going to be having donation days at area restaurants to help us raise money for our chapter. We will be on campus handing out flyers, as well as sharing them on Facebook and Twitter and hope that you will have a meal that, in turn, helps us continue our work. The following dates and eateries are set up for Phi Theta Kappa donation days: Dickey's Barbecue in Sherman on 29 January, 26 February, 5 March and 26 March and Firehouse Subs on 10 February. We appreciate your support!

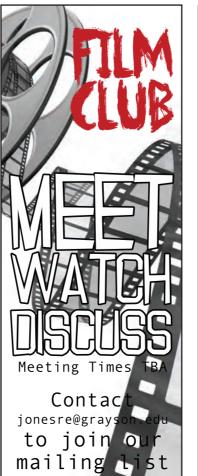

We love all the support from our fellow students and faculty; all of you make to engage in service projects and educational ventures. We have set a date for Spring Induction, 2 May at 4 p.m., and hope that every student will be eager to join Phi Theta Kappa. We are the official International 2-year College Honors Society and we want you to come learn, grow and have a blast with us as we compete for scholarships and make new friends. If you have questions about joining, please see our award-winning advisor, Professor Mary Linder, in her office on the second floor of the Life Center (Office 204) or email her at linderm@grayson.edu. ♥

"The solution is not to bemoan technology but to develop strategies of selfcontrol, as we do with every other temptation in life." The Internet and sources available to everyone can help us learn new things with the help of others sharing what they know online. If interested about particular scientists, writers or anyone else for that matter, by going online we can create a slight connection with them by reading about them or reading their work. We can extend our researches to come to conclusions. We can become smarter with the help of books and our updating technology.

Instant Gratification

In today's generation, the quicker something is done, the better. The goal when connecting with someone is to be able to see them faceto-face or hear them when they are speaking to form a bond and have it completed quickly. Things like webcams enable us to video chat with one another, whether it is a meeting or just a casual conversation, right at that moment. While one might feel alone or feel the need to have a conversation, the Internet allows us to talk and former's self-consciousness.

connect with people internationally.

Overcoming Anxiety

Many people throughout the world suffer with social anxiety which causes a conflict with being in public with people. They get nervous or have a fear of people staring or looking at them. It causes them to be insecure and have discomfort when it comes to social interaction. The Internet provides a way for people with conditions such as social anxiety to be social in a form that isn't necessarily face-to-face, but through sending messages to be more comfortable yet make new friends and meet new people in a different way. The quick connection and access to the Internet plays a helpful role in connecting with others.

Public vs. Private

Balance is necessary when it comes to deciding when enough is enough with technology. Digital connection can create an illusion of being close to people when in reality we're only distancing ourselves. One could become so sucked into the digital world that they seclude themselves from the actual physical world. In "I Tweet, Therefore I Am" by Peggy Orenstein, she says, "...I am trying to gain some perspective on the perpetual per-out the line between person and persona, the public and private self." She learns to separate what the whole world should know through her posting on social media and when she should just enjoy things as they are happening in front of her. There are times when we should put down our phone, tablet or computer and enjoy life without feeling urged to be on the Internet.

Education Benefits

Digital connection has offered us with a way to contact each other in various ways. College professors can now post about assignments online and have the assignment turned in typed instead students having to hand write them, which saves both the teacher and student a lot of time. Assignments are now more legible to the teachers due to them being typed instead of them having to try and decipher what students with poor handwriting have written.

Another good thing about most of the college classes' information being online is that students will always be prepared for what is coming up or currently happening in the class. If one has questions or concerns about an assignment, test or anything regarding to the class, then the students have access to the college's website where they can contact their professor no matter what time or day it is allowing them to have their question or concern answered even if it is after the professor's working hours. Therefore, students are able to get to know about their professors as well as receive help or advice.

In conclusion, digital connections today are advancing at a progressive rate. The Internet introduces many options to all generations of people whether it is video chatting with friends or family, shopping online, researching, or even connecting with teachers.

Although it can become addicting, with the right amount of self-restraint one can obtain having a balance between mentally and physically being present. Communication is stronger than ever with the creation of the Internet and will continue to help the world become more knowledgeable about each other and cultures. In the pre-Internet days, sharing information was limited to an extent and getting things done quickly took longer than they do now. Today, digital connection is unlimited and things can be shared within seconds offering endless opportunities and options to all people regardless of their age. Whether people like it or not, technology is evolving the world as we know it.

Some students call for new sanitation measures

Logan Beauchamp Student

As flu season enters into full swing our student populace comes into contact with its symptoms on campus in a variety of ways. We touch door knobs, use the public restrooms, even sitting next to our fellow students can pose a threat. These are just a few of the multitude of examples we encounter everyday.

The one place we assume is clean and safe is where we join to eat. Yet this is not entirely true. When we sit down at a lunchroom table the first thing we are confronted with is an OPEN bowl of napkins. This may seem harmless enough to the naked eye, but what we don't see are the germs left by everyone who has come before us. Every breath, sneeze or clumsy napkin grasp carries with it pathogens that hitchhike on a ride to wipe that bit of sauce out off the corner of your mouth.

No matter how many times the tables are cleaned the napkins are still there, unchanged and sullied. This could all be remedied with a simple and cost effective measure known as the SAN-ITARY NAPKIN DISPENS-ER. These devices are ingeniously designed to contain napkins so that they are not exposed to the open air and all that it contains.

Though it would be a small investment for the college it would pay dividends in student attendance and general well being. They are reasonably priced and can be purchased wholesale for less than $150. It is my opinion that this purchase is absolutely necessary in order to maintain a healthy and hygienic campus environment and would recommend it as soon as possible.

Finding our way to success

Kay Dishner Retired Professor of English

The time we schedule and set a goal to accomplish will require a plan to follow. The great thing about a plan is even when we mess up or fail, we have a way to get back on track and move forward instead of giving in to failure and quitting. So when you set a goal, be sure you make the plan to get you there, because without a plan success is impossible. For instance, if you decide to drive to New York but do not have a map, how do you know where to go? If you set a goal of passing a class but do no plan and schedue time to attend the class and do the work, failure is inevitable. The most important part of any plan is the time

scheduled to complete it.

Without time, nothing can be accomplished and wasted time cannot be retrieved. So, scheduling time to accomplish goals is the key to success. Making and keeping a schedule is not easy, but it is essential to a successful outcome. Taking time to think through our needs and responsibilities and scheduling the time to accomplish them will be the single most important ingredient for success in any of our endeavors.

If you are thinking it might be time for a "checkup" on how your life is going, use three simple steps to check your wellness: (1) do you have goals to be accomplished, (2) do you have plans in place for accomplishing the goals and (3) are you working your plans? Maybe it is time to reorganize, rethink or reestablishor maybe just a little more focus will set you back on the "road to success." ♥

Leon Deutsch
Director of Teaching and Learning

During pre-planning week, faculty of Grayson College participated in several opportunities for training. On Thursday, 15 January, Brad McClenny and Leon Deutsch offered a presentation on "Promoting Diversity in Your Classroom."

One of the main highlights of the session was an interview with a brand new international student at GC. Benjamin Tolo had only been in this country for one week when this training occurred. Tolo is from Kenya.

McClenny asked Benjamin several questions about his first impression of America, what it is like to attend school in Kenya and what his goals and plans are at GC. One of the most impressive answers Benjamin gave was in reference to a question about when he would be able to return home for a visit. He mentioned that because of the high cost of travel, he hopes to return home for a visit after finishing his four year degree. This is just one example of the sacrifice that many of our international students make in pursuit of their education.

Benjamin is a very professional, goal-oriented and respectful young man that is very aware of the great opportunity that he has to study here in the United States. Leon Deutsch hopes that many of the faculty and staff will make the effort to become more acquainted with our international students and take advantage of the benefits of bringing cultural diversity into the classroom.

Sherman Museum Press Release

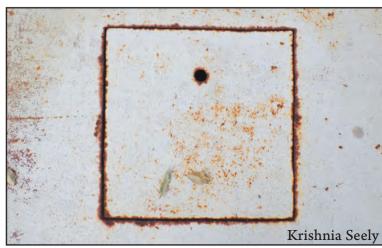

(SHERMAN, Texas) January 20, 2014 –The Sherman Museum announced today that a new exhibit entitled "Texoma Music Hall of Fame" is now open. The exhibition will run from 16 January through 30 May and highlights the lives and careers of several famous musicians that have ties to the Texoma region. Vintage records, instruments and other music related artifacts are also on display.

Seven artists are featured in the "Texoma Music Hall of Fame," including: Bomar Cramer, Buddy Tate, Reba McEntire, Gene Autry, Miranda Lambert, Buck Owens and Blake Shelton. Musicians such as Randy Travis and Johnny Perry are also included in the exhibit. "It's exciting to have so many important musicians with roots in this area and we wanted this exhibit to celebrate their lives and honor their accomplishments," said Executive Director Dan Steelman. Museum visitors will find an acoustic guitar that once belonged to Sherman native and Country Music Hall of Fame recipient Buck Owens on display during the exhibit. Owens donated the guitar to the City of Sherman in 1996 and it is part of the permanent collection on display in the upstairs lobby at Kidd-Key Auditorium. The city has generously loaned it to the museum for the exhibit, along with two large scale paintings, one of Buck Owens and another of saxophonist Buddy Tate.

The Sherman Museum is open Tuesday through Saturday from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Admission is: $5.00 for adults; $3.00 for seniors (Ages 60+); $2.00 for students (ages 6-18) and for those with a college ID; FREE for children 5 and under and FREE for museum members.
