By Janis Thompson

Have you ever been to a welding rodeo? If not, don’t miss your chance! Grayson College will be holding its 3rd Annual Welding Rodeo on May 10, 2013.

“This event has really grown, especially with the help from local businesses who employ welders,” says Greg Beckley, Director of the Welding Technologies Program at Grayson College. The rodeo hosts high school welding teams who set up their welding equipment on the parking lot in front of the main foyer and a small set of booths to demarcate their welding skills and artistic ca-

The military can be such a rapid and adventurous life experience. While serving a little less than two years, I was fortunate enough to wear three different types of uniforms. Every uniform that I received has significant meaning in discerning the times I wore them. From the Battle Dress Uniform in basic training to the Desert Combat Uniform and Army Combat Uniform in Iraq, they all have a story to tell.

While attending basic training at Ft. Jackson, South Carolina, I was wearing the mean green B.D.U.s, also known as the Desert Dress Uniform, with a pair of tight brown underwear that we, the new soldiers, called brown boots. The thing I hated most was the B.D.U.s, and Army Combat Uniform, and Army Combat Uniform.

GC Honors students attend Great Plains Honors Council April 5 in Amarillo

By Samantha Robinson

Students seeking an academic challenge are often faced with the dilemma of being immersed in the same educational atmosphere as their peers, with little or no opportunity for intellectual stimulation beyond the classroom. This dilemma is often solved by enrolling in honors courses, which provide students with an environment that is more conducive to intellectual growth.

The education provided in honors courses is often more rigorous and demanding, but it also offers students an edge in terms of postgraduate education. Honors programs are designed to prepare students for graduate school, and the skills and knowledge they acquire in these programs can be transferred to a wide range of academic and professional fields.

An honors program can be introduced as early as the high school level. This can be beneficial for students who have already demonstrated a strong interest in academic pursuits. A group of five students climbed into the Grayson van loaded down with much (very likely too much) luggage.

Theoretically the drive could not have been more beautiful or serene, but in reality the drive was no different. The day was filled with beautiful scenery, endless fields, and a small group of friends who were all ready for the upcoming adventure.

Upon arrival in Amarillo, the group met with former GC student Katie Turner and her teaching assistant, Patrick Larowe.

In keeping it civil, I’ll forego discussion of the factors that brought us here, but let’s just say that it was a beautiful day. The honors college student Katie Turner and her teaching assistant, Patrick Larowe, were ready and waiting to welcome the group.

The centerpiece of the event was the reception held at the Grayson Hair and Nail Salon. This reception was an opportunity for the students to network and build new relationships with other honors students from across the country.

The Viking completed a 12-0 victory over Oklahoma State Cowgirls in the recent Student Life Symposium. This victory was the result of a well-planned and executed game plan, and it was a testament to the hard work and dedication of the players.

Congratulations to the students who worked hard to prepare for this match and to the administrators who supported their efforts. We are all proud of the成就s and look forward to seeing more great victories in the future.

For the uninitiated, there is a popular sport in the world, table tennis (table tennis is the third most popular sport in the world, after soccer and volleyball). For the uninitiated, there is a game I could get out of the chair and into the tennis court. It’s a game in which you can get a good workout, enjoy some exercise, and challenge yourself and your opponents to a friendly competition.

On April 5, Honors College Director Dr. Jean Sorensen led a group of five students climbed into the Grayson van loaded down with much (very likely too much) luggage.

The Grayson van was driven to Amarillo and parked in front of the Plains Historical Museum. The students then made their way inside to explore the museum, which was a great way to spend an afternoon.

The lecture portion of the event was held at the Grayson Hair and Nail Salon. The lecture was given by Dr. Leigh Browning, an extraordinarily engaging and passionate speaker. Dr. Browning gave a lecture on the topic of home school education, which was both informative and thought-provoking.

After the lecture, the students had the opportunity to ask questions and engage in a discussion with Dr. Browning. The students were able to gain a deeper understanding of the topic and to share their own thoughts and experiences.

The event was a great opportunity for the students to meet new people, learn about new ideas, and gain a deeper understanding of the world around them. It was a great way to spend an afternoon and to get out of the classroom.
Ambassadors have returned to alumni, students and faculty. Dr. McMillen was invited to re-turn to campus to interact with the structure for my collegiate partners in education and me with renewed energy to carry out that work at Graysville College.

A graduate of nearby Bonhav Hill High School, McMillen earned his bachelor’s master’s degrees in sociology and then a doctorate in higher education, all from Texas A&M University–Commerce in 1995. His career path includes both college and university experiences. Former employers are Paris Junior College, A&M-Commerce and Trinlity Valley College in Texas. His role at such institutions included leadership responsibilities in Student Affairs, Personnel, Educational Testing Service, Institutional Research, Planning and Effectiveness, and Academic Affairs. In July 2012, Graysville College employes and students were happy to welcome Dr. McMillen to a President of the College.

The Children Reek of Arrogance and Insecuity

The poem below contains much particulars meant to hurt me. It is painful to read. I hope you can sympathize with my feelings.

The Children Reek of Arrogance and Insecuity

Little omyxomcy nubbles—’Till you, ’You’re Special, but you’re not the first.’

I'm the one to see the answer.

But most of all, I pray that God does not allow that seed to grow in the weave of those around me. So, for I give you for never taking the time to see the beautiful underneath the pain, and I forgive you for making myself to put down my fears.

But, you will not have the satisfaction of seeing someone who knew that there was and still is a mean and cruel mother who shows no love to anyone. I did not see what you and the others saw. I looked out who I was. I have tried to find someone who would love me. I have none to be seen. As if someone inside of me who deserves to be loved, to be respected. After years and years of self torture, I am giving this seed to you! Plant it and feed it well with the fertilizer that is the words of those who don’t think so highly of you. It was and is still growing upward like a proud flower. I have seen no one who is different. Didn't get the answers she was looking for? 'Come over here.' Daddy's little whore, drunk, and unemployed. Reused, raped—oysters—salt to taste. They’ve saved up for the waste. Dug in my heart, burned, stabbed, stabbed. Slow-mo self-destruction; it’s a creeper, creeper.

uniforms I have worn, but they all tie in to my honoring my country and really understanding that no matter how strong my country is, it is the people who run it. The Battle Dress Uniform was the alpha and omega of my military career. It gave me the sense of wanting to move forward and find out more about what new life I had found myself in. When I wore the D.C.U.s were like my uniform. It was my keep-ter point in my military career. It gave me both power and wisdom. The Cus and the D.C.U.s are growing upward like a proud flower. I have been hurt by some of my military career I had to do, not only because things were so hard to imagine, I could not understand some the time I was wearing. Since the time I was wearing. I was no full of anger and stress of any kind, I learned to take care of my uniform, not just wear it. The uniform of a military career I had to go through is not something I would have wanted to happen, but it had to happen. The peace that I learned to carry around in the back of my mind and soul. I do not see what you see, and yet I never want to lose that love. I can’t lose that love. It is there that I see my people with renewed energy to carry out mission. Yes, I have also enjoyed reading. We would also like to say thank you to the Young Educators Club and Phi Theta Kappa, whom through their efforts, have been busy collecting books for the college library and computer
